Marching Through Swarthmore.

A song suggested by the triumph gained by Swarthmore over the other Colleges of the Inter-State League. Winning from the University of Pa. the championship cup of the State. May 17, 1890.

Tune: "Marching through Georgia."

Bring the good old bugle boys
We'll sing another song;
Sing it with a spirit
That will start the world along.
Sing it as we love to sing it,
Voices good and strong,
While we are marching through Swarthmore.

CHORUS.

Hurrah! hurrah! we sing of old Swarthmore!
Hurrah! hurrah! for our gallant tug-of-war!
So will sing her athletes
Who are plucky to the core,
While we are marching through Swarthmore.

How old Swarthmore shouted
When she heard the joyful sound;
How her children hailed the cup
Her noble athletes found;
How the very oak trees
Even started from the ground,
While we are marching through Swarthmore. - Chorus.

Yes and there were 'Varsity men
Let fall most woeful tears,
When they lost the silver cup
That they had held for years.
Lost and gained by us
They deemed unworthy of their fears,
While we are marching through Swarthmore. - Chorus.

"Swarthmore's quiet Quaker lads
Will never push us most."
So the Pennsylvania's said
And 't was a handsome boast
Had they not forgot alas!
The day with the best

CHARACTER.
 Character grows, for the most part, insensibly, as the life grows at first. Now and then it gets notable impulses which we can mark, but commonly it grows imperceptibly, like other bodies. It drinks in food like the tree, from both earth and sky, and from hidden sources in both, and, like it, shows its whole history on its boughs and branches from the first. The sunshine and the storm, the cold North wind and the soft South, the knife or the neglect, write themselves all over life, in its knots and gnarls or smooth branches, knots leaning this way or that, its stunted barrenness or broad shadow, or that bending fruitfulness or its woody wantonness—not a leaf but leaves its mark, its sunbeam but has told on it, not a rain-drop but had added to it. The same tree that is soft and spongy in a fat wamp, that is heavy air, grows hard and noble on the hillside. Spitzbergen forests are breast-high, and Nova Scotia hemlocks mourn their cold, wet sky in long, weird shrouds of white moss. The influences round us are self-registering. Our spirits, like the winds, unconsciously write their story in all its fulness on the anemometer—life; slowly in light airs, little, the whole comes in the end. Singe acts may show character, but they seldom form it, though some are supreme and ruling. It grows ring by ring, and the twig of this year becomes the bough of next.—Our habits are another name for it, and they grow like the grass. The man's face lies behind the boy's, but it comes out only after a round of winters and summers.—Dr. Geikie.

A Battle.

The morning was cloudy

The morning dawned with clouds obscuring that blue vault of heaven and promised to be a dark and dreary day, but ~~at~~ ^{before} the day was three hours old, the sun had ^{come} ~~been~~ felled ^{out} all traces of an approaching storm. The day was truly one of God's own creation, and how sad it seemed to mar the fair face of Nature with the devastation of war. Amid "fine" writing.

Distant rumblings could be heard as if some wild beast had ^{wounded} ~~been~~ ^{a beast lashing itself} ~~been~~ ^{been} ~~trapped~~ ^{trapped} and was bashing itself into a passion in its vain endeavor to escape. The guff muttering became clearer and we could distinguish the heavy tramp of hooves and of men and the clack of steel. Suddenly we saw a flash of something white as snow; it was a shield thrown up to save an unprotected head.

Soon we heard the sharp reports of cannon and saw the

GREEK LETTER FRATERNITIES.
 The new Chicago University finds itself compelled, at the beginning of its career, to deal with that phase of college life known as the Greek Letter Fraternity. The different societies new established at nearly all the colleges in the country have made application to institute chapters and with much interest. Those members of the faculty who graduated chapters and years ago are included in the awaited proposition, while many of the younger professors are decidedly in favor of more active answer. As the Chicago University promise to become the leading institutional institution of the West, and likely strongly to color college life in neighborhood, the position it takes on Greek letter society question will affect the status of these fraternities to an important degree.

Greek letter societies have probably any other question of college authorities as much concern. Their first establishment in did not meet with the approval of the faculties, and it will warrant all that the first attempt to divert this opposition. Now held out as a reason for their literary features and fast living. For mental discipline most colleges frowned upon them wholly, they were only a

There are to-day about 6,500 women graduates and undergraduates of higher institutions of learning in the United States who are members of Greek letter secret societies. In the matter of this number members of societies established at only a single institution are not included, but only those who belong to organizations which are intercollegiate in character. Greek is the largest of these fraternities, the very essence of which is a single institution. They have kite-shaped letters which represent the very essence of the society. The letters are not different from the letters of the alphabet, but only those who belong to organizations which are intercollegiate in character. Next to the Phi Beta Kappa comes Kappa Kappa Gamma, which has 22 chapters and about 1,000 members. This fraternity is also a woman's society, and its members are revealed behind those oaken doors. In some of the fraternities the social element and in others the literary element prevails, but all aim at what they consider a happy life.

Greek Masterpieces.

Professor W. H. Appleton of Swarthmore College has done an excellent service to those who appreciate the wonderful beauty and charm of Greek poetry, or who would enjoy it if they should become acquainted with it, by collecting into a tasteful volume about one hundred and seventy-five of the choicest specimens. These represent the Iliad and Odyssey, the Homeric hymns, Hesiod, Pindar, Æschylus, Sophocles, Euripides, Aristophanes, Theocritus, Moschus, Anacreon, Bion, Sappho, and several others. These are from the best translators, including Chapman, Pope, Leigh Hunt, Cowper, Shelley, Mrs. Browning, Worsley, Edwin Arnold, Symonds, Bulwer, Frere, Bryant, Stedman, Lawton, and others. The attractive collection is introduced by an excellent essay by Professor Appleton.
