THE COLLEGE NEWS

WAR-TIME WASHINGTON

If not a child of light the summer afternoon is at least the season of heat. She throws herself into her room at night with luxurious abandon, and when she refreshes—it is barely 102 here!

As she steps down Pennsylvania Avenue, she hears the muffled, distant sprightly carefree; her greatest problem is to be seen behind some screechchair-Colonel that she may receive salutes of all the marines she meets. She twices to get a better view of a foreign officer in a buff coat and grips her neighbor's arm excitedly when she recognizes a soldier's motion.

The place that knows her most next to her office is the cafeteria. Washington is as a matter of fact, one of two cities where one waits for hours and gets what one wants, and those where one waits for hours and gets what one doesn't want. The second class, tightly grapy a rag which the Forbes and tumblers rattle, usually meets her fate at the table, though it takes a good deal of capital to acquire the proprietress. "Harry un- line's waiting."—A—clam chowder soup. She repeats her customers and passes on swiftly, only to wonder sadly, "Why didn't I order scalloped fish with asparagus? It has been 28 cents and this is 29!"

The feeling of independence achieved by the Washington summer colonel is no small part of her joys. She even smiles in a superior way when she overhears, as she first became her fortune, "I wish these government workers would wear uniforms. Then you could tell them from the ladies!"

Silver Bay Delegation Athletically Indicted

Hear of Other College's War Work

Following the advice of their leader, M. Carey, the delegation arrived a day earlier and was well established at "Outlook," the highest house on the grounds, where classes and lectures be- gan.

Two very enthrallingly attended courses were given by Dr. Glibke, formerly assistant to Dr. Mutch, and Dr. Mohlenkamp, who gave a series of lectures on The last winter.

The problems arising in the work of the war councils, student government, athletic associations, and other associations, were discussed in special afternoon sessions. In particular, the Bryn Mawr and Mt. Holyoke were the only colleges that had decided to put the question of the war to a vote. Mr. Smith and Mr. Syracuse, it was found, put all war contributions for the year on an annual basis, while students wait on table as a war measure.

some of the fresh vegetables were sold to people living in Bryn Mawr for the summer, and up to September 1st netted about $118. The greater part of the corn, tomatoes and string beans was canned, and some is to be kept for winter use by the college. About 150 bushels of potatoes have been stored in the college bins.

Workers irreplaceable
The finances show a deficit, but alumnae friends have contributed the expenses by advancing in loans and gifts the sum of $408.78. Money deficit probably to no lack of enthusiasm among the workers.

Vera de la Harpe, successor to Tilly Superfield, could not deliberate them, and their eight-hour working day allowed pleasant interludes like the serenade to Mrs. Pankhurst while she was staying in the Deanery.
